Has your facility been idle during the COVID-19 crisis? Many companies have had to respond to Arkansas’ Targeted-Approach orders without the opportunity to prepare their facility for being unoccupied for an extended period.

Electrical systems and equipment deteriorate, even when they are left idle. Neglecting idle equipment or trying to bring it back to full operation without having it tested and inspected could lead to equipment failure and a delay in reopening your facility.

If you have not taken the appropriate maintenance measures to protect your facility’s electrical system, please contact Koontz Electric before resuming operations in your building.

Our technicians have the capabilities to inspect your facility’s electrical system to find and address hidden issues to help ensure your building is ready to safely resume operations.

To learn more about the solutions we can provide to help improve your building’s electrical system, check out our list of Top Ten Services and contact us today.
